On behalf of Murray W. Chitra who was Chair in 2010, I am pleased to report on activities during that calendar year.

During 2010, the Commission released eight decisions. These related to police discipline, employment status, budgets and restructuring. Full texts of these decisions can be found on our website at www.ocpc.ca

The Commission received a number of requests to initiate investigations and 254 requests to review decisions made by police services with regard to public complaints about police officer conduct, and police policies and services under the previous version of the Police Services Act.

I would like to reaffirm the Commission's commitment, as demonstrated through 49 years of responsive public service, to ensure the proactive oversight of police services and police services boards across Ontario.

Yours truly,

David C. Gavsie
Chair

Mission Statement

The Ontario Civilian Police Commission (the “Commission”) is an independent oversight agency committed to serving the public by ensuring that adequate and effective policing services are provided to the community in a fair and accountable manner.

Mandate

The Commission’s legislative authority is set out in the Police Services Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. P.15, as amended, (the “Act”) and the Interprovincial Policing Act, R.S.O. 2009, c. 30.

Commission Values

Fairness – The provision of service and performance of statutory functions in an impartial, lawful, unbiased and just manner.

Accessibility – The ability to provide information and services that are simple and easy to use.

Timeliness – The performance of tasks within established time frames based on reasonable expectations.

Quality and Consistency – The production of accurate, relevant, dependable, understandable and predictable information and results, with no errors in law or fact.

Transparency –The use of policies and procedures that are clear and understandable to everyone involved.

Expertise – The possession and use of the skill, knowledge and technical competence required to discharge all statutory responsibilities and maintain public confidence.

Optimum Cost – The provision of services at a cost that is based on best practices and is cost effective for everyone involved.

Courtesy – The demonstration of respect to everyone who works in and/or comes into contact with the agency.

Role of the Commission

Mandate

The Commission is an independent oversight agency of the Ministry of Community Safety and Correctional Services, which reports administratively to the Minister.

The Commission is responsible for ensuring that adequate and effective police services are provided throughout Ontario. Its oversight powers are an important element of the civilian governance structure set out in the Act. To ensure compliance with the Act, the Commission has the authority to investigate policing related matters, hold different types of hearings and make recommendations with regard to the delivery of police services in a community.

Police services and police services boards are ultimately accountable to the public through the Commission.

Appeals

The Commission hears appeals of decisions at police disciplinary hearings concerning complaints about police conduct made by members of the public or initiated by chiefs of police. The hearings are called by a chief of police and are presided over by a hearing officer who is a police officer, a former police officer, a judge or former judge.

A public complainant and a police officer each have the right to appeal to the Commission in writing within 30 days of receiving notice of the decision at a disciplinary hearing. After hearing the appeal, the Commission may:

- confirm, vary or revoke the decision of the hearing officer;
- substitute its own decision; or
- where the complaint is related to events occurring after October 19, 2009, it may also order a new hearing.

In fulfilling its appellate role, the Commission ensures that the decision of the hearing officer is based on facts established by the evidence at the hearing, and reflects the proper application of the law.

Investigations and Inquiries

The Commission may investigate and inquire into the administration of a municipal police service, the manner in which policing services are being provided, and the policing needs of a municipality. The Commission may be directed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council to hold an inquiry into any matter relating to crime or law enforcement. As well, the Commission may independently investigate and inquire into the conduct or work performance of police officers, chiefs of police, members of local police services boards, auxiliary members of a police service, special constables and municipal law enforcement officers.

Hearings

As a quasi-judicial body, the Commission has specific authority to hold different types of hearings to ensure compliance with the Act. The Commission:

- decides disputes between local police services boards and municipal councils about annual police budgets;
- approves the restructuring of municipal police services;
- determines whether or not a disabled member of a police service has been accommodated;
- rules on disputes about membership in municipal police bargaining units; and
- rules on whether or not prescribed standards of police services are being met.

Approvals

The Commission approves the appointment of First Nations constables to perform specified duties in designated geographical areas.

Public Complaints

The Commission has responsibility for overseeing public complaints about police conduct, policies and services provided by a police service where the complaints are related to events which occurred prior to October 19, 2009. The Commission continues to complete outstanding public complaint review files.

The process for dealing with such matters is as follows. Members of the public, who are not satisfied with a local police decision about their complaints, may ask the Commission to review the matter.

When conducting a review, the Commission receives the complaint file from the police service as well as submissions from the complainant. A Commission case manager will analyze the file and prepare a case summary to present to a review panel of Commission members.

The panel may:

- confirm the decision of the Chief of Police/OPP Commissioner;
- refer the matter back to the involved police service or another police service for further investigation;
- find misconduct of a less serious nature; or
- order a disciplinary hearing.

Commission: The Organization

The Commission is made up of a full-time Chair and seven part-time members.

Members are appointed by Order-in-Council for terms of two, three and five years, and represent a diverse cross-section of professions and Ontario communities. They have extensive backgrounds in law, education, community advocacy, human rights, corrections, victims' rights, and criminal and aboriginal justice. Members are supported in their role by advisory, legal, investigative and administrative Commission staff.

In addition to attending regular monthly meetings at the Commission's Toronto office, members sit on panels to review how local police services have classified and investigated public complaints about police conduct and police policies and services. Commission members also preside at a range of hearings, including disciplinary appeals.

Outreach

Each year, the Commission actively engages police officers and civilian staff of police services and police services boards in discussions about their roles in police governance and civilian oversight. The ultimate goal is to ensure understanding of the Commission's mandate.

Staff lend their time and expertise in promoting general awareness of legislative requirements and specific operational responsibilities. Opportunities for open dialogue – both formal and informal – include annual conferences/zone meetings of the Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police, Ontario Association of Police Services Boards and the Police Association of Ontario.

The Commission is regularly invited to participate in ongoing education and training programs offered by the Ontario Police College and the Ontario Provincial Police Training Academy. Presentations are made to Professional Standards officers as well as senior officers and legal staff who have investigative and administrative responsibilities within the complaints and appeal processes.

Inquiries, Investigations and Fact-Finding Reviews

Section 25 of the Act provides that the Commission may, on its own motion or at the request of the Solicitor General, the Independent Police Review Director, a municipal council or a board, investigate, inquire into and report on,

- the conduct or the performance of duties of a police officer, a municipal chief of police, an auxiliary member of a police force, a special constable, a municipal law enforcement officer or a member of a board;
- the performance of duties of an appointing official under the Interprovincial Policing Act, 2009;
- the administration of a municipal police force;
- the manner in which police services are provided for a municipality;
- the police needs of a municipality. R.S.O. 1990, c. P.15, s. 25 (1); 1997, c. 8, s. 17 (1, 2); 2007, c. 5, s. 7 (1); 2009, c. 30, s. 45 (1).

Initiation of a section 25 inquiry is a serious, resource-intensive process with the potential for serious consequences for the members, chiefs of police and police services boards who are involved. The consequences can include demotion, dismissal, suspension or revocation of an appointment.

In 1998 the Commission initiated an innovative approach to addressing issues that were deemed to be of concern, but not falling within the parameters of a full-scale inquiry, the “Fact-Finding Review.” This approach continues today. In 2010, the Commission received several requests to invoke its powers under section 25.

Section 116 Status Hearings

Municipal police forces in Ontario are composed of “members” who are appointed by local police services boards. Section 2 of the Act defines “members” to include both police officers and civilian employees.

The Act permits members to form associations for the purposes of collective bargaining. Normally, there are two associations: one for officers and civilians, and another for senior officers. Under section 115(2) of the Act chiefs and deputy chiefs are excluded from this scheme.

From time to time a dispute arises as to whether or not a particular member should be assigned to the local police association or to the senior officers association. Section 116 of the Act sets out a process to resolve such disagreements. It states:

- (1) If there is a dispute as to whether a person is a member of a police force or a senior officer, any affected person may apply to the Commission to hold a hearing and decide the matter.
- (2) The Commission’s decision is final.

There were no section 116 status matters before the Commission during 2010. The full text of previous section 116 status decisions can be found on the Commission’s web site at www.ocpc.ca

Section 39 Budget Hearing

Police services boards are required to submit their operating and capital estimates annually to municipal council that show, separately, the amounts that will be required to maintain the municipal police force and provide it with the equipment and facilities that it needs to operate, as well as the amount of money required to pay the expenses of the board's operation other than the remuneration of board members.

Upon a review of the estimates, it is the municipal council's responsibility to establish an overall budget for the board.

Section 39 (5) of the Act states, "If the board is not satisfied that the budget established for it by the council is sufficient to maintain an adequate number of police officers or other employees of the police force or to provide the police force with adequate equipment or facilities, the board may request that the Commission determine the question and the Commission, shall, after a hearing, do so."

There were no section 39 budget matters before the Commission during 2010. The full text of previous section 39 budget decisions can be found on the Commission's web site at www.ocpc.ca

Police Service Restructuring

Section 40 of the Act allows police services boards to terminate the employment of a member of a police force for the purpose of abolishing the force or reducing its size if the Commission consents and if the abolition does not contravene the Act.

When a municipality requests the approval of the Commission for the disbandment or downsizing of their police service, they must supply the Commission with a copy of a resolution passed by municipal council. The Commission requests a copy of the proposal for the provision of alternative policing services and also ascertains whether severance arrangements have been made with those members whose employment would be terminated if the proposal is accepted.

It is not the Commission's function to judge whether or not what is being proposed is economical or superior to what may already be in place or any other alternative. The Commission's focus is to determine whether the proposed arrangements meet the requirements of the Act. It is not the function of the Commission to determine what constitutes appropriate severance arrangements. That is a matter for bargaining between the parties and, in the absence of agreement, for arbitration under the Act.

A public meeting is held to hear presentations and receive submissions about the proposal to reduce or disband a municipal police service. Following the completion of the meeting, the Commission considers all of the information provided and renders a written decision.

During 2010, the Commission approved the disbandment of two municipal police services: the Leamington Police Service and the Wawa Police Service. Both services were disbanded in favour of contract policing by the Ontario Provincial Police. The official text of these and previous restructuring decisions can be found on the Commission's web site at www.ocpc.ca

First Nations Policing

The Constitution Act, 1867 assigned responsibility for the administration of justice to the provinces. Constitutionally and legislatively, Ontario is responsible for the delivery of policing services in all parts of the province, including on First Nations reserves and territories.

In 1975, the Task Force on Policing led to the establishment of a tripartite arrangement for funding the Ontario First Nations Policing Agreement. The Ontario Provincial Police administer the program and provide support. There has been a gradual transfer of administrative responsibility from the OPP to First Nations governing authorities. Some of the functions, which previously had been the exclusive responsibility of the OPP, have become jointly administered; others have been assumed completely by First Nations.

Section 54(1) of the Act, states, "With the Commission's approval, the Commissioner may appoint a First Nations Constable to perform specific duties."

Section 54(2) of the Act states, "If the specified duties of a First Nations Constable relate to a reserve as defined in the Indian Act (Canada), the appointment also requires the approval of the reserve's governing authority or band council."

First Nations Constables are responsible for enforcing provincial and federal laws and band bylaws in First Nations territories.

In 2010, there were 573 First Nations Constables serving. During the year, the Commission approved 43 First Nations Constable appointments.
