FOREWORD

The "Commission of Inquiry Concerning Certain Activities of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police," more commonly known as the McDonald Commission, is generally acknowledged to be one of the most in depth and comprehensive studies of security intelligence issues in the world. Owing to the lack of an indexing system, however, researchers and officials have perhaps made less use of the Commission's findings than what otherwise might have been the case. In 1986, the Ministry of the Solicitor General undertook to rectify this problem by undertaking to create such an index.

The index is organized on the same basis as that used by the McDonald Commission itself. Separate indexes appear for each of the following:

First Report - "Security and Information";

Second Report - "Freedom and Security under the Law";

Third Report - "Certain RCMP Activities and the Question of Governmental Knowledge"; and Supplement to Part VI of the Third Report.

An attempt has been made to create as complete an index as possible, with annotation and cross-referencing being made where necessary or most appropriate.

The index is the work of Rob Ferguson of Queen's University who was employed in the Police and Security Branch of the Ministry Secretariat under the auspices of the Career-Oriented Summer Employment Program (COSEP).
